

HANDS-ON EXPERIENCE YOU CAN COUNT ON

At Riverside Home Designs, we're capable of handling your project from concept to completion. We have well over 40 years of experience in designing and building everything from warehouses to office buildings. We specialize in designing large Hill Country-style homes. We have drawn plans for small 1,100-square-foot, space-efficient tract homes to extremely large custom homes with over 12,000 square feet of air-conditioned area with all the imaginable luxury and recreational amenities.

ALL OUR DESIGNS MEET LOCAL, AND NATIONAL BUILDING CODES

Riverside Home Designs strives to provide construction documents that are detailed and that provide a clear and concise representation of the project at hand. Our plans are designed to meet the International Residential Code. In addition, if your project is located within a municipality that has enacted other local or city building codes, those guidelines will also be followed. We guarantee that you can obtain whatever building permits are required for your project.

DEDICATED PROFESSIONALS AT YOUR SERVICE

We offer professional architectural plans that are designed to overcome unforeseen building expenses during the construction phase. All drawings are cross-examined for 3-D compatibility to ensure that stairs and other main features work as planned. All our plans have details and sections that are self-explanatory and that complement the other sheets and documents.

SHOP DRAWINGS: WE CAN REPRESENT ANYTHING NEEDED TO ANY GIVEN SCALE

Metric or imperial, we can draw any type of shop drawing needed. It is not necessary to provide the entire specifications book. We are only interested in the section where your product applies. Send the relevant sections and details along with a set of plans that are appropriate to the work scope, and we will do the rest.

WHAT DOES A CPBD DESIGNATION MEAN?

Just like an architect is certified by the Texas Board of Architectural Examiners, a CPBD professional is certified by the National Council of Building Designer Certification. The CPBD designation means that the Design Professional has fulfilled the education and demonstrated the experience requirements to obtain the CPBD designation. To obtain the CPBD designation, a professional designer has to have demonstrated that he has been engaged in the professional practice of building design for a minimum of six years. The individual has to have industry-relevant education, such as training or courses relating to architecture or structural engineering in an accredited institution, or have been employed and received on-the-job training under the supervision of a Professional Building Designer, Architect, or a Professional Engineer. He has to pass a rigorous 11 hour-multiple section test to become accredited.
